The Computer Science Department at the University of California, Santa Cruz (UCSC) invites applications for a teaching professor position at the Lecturer with Potential for Security of Employment level. Applicants should be able to contribute to the department’s academic degree programs through teaching and service responsibilities. Candidates should have expertise as well as a record of outstanding teaching in computer science. We have a preference for candidates with experience and expertise in teaching introductory and intermediate programming language courses.

Successful candidates will be expected to develop and teach courses within the undergraduate and graduate curriculum, engage in field-related professional achievement and activity, and perform university and professional service. The ability to contribute significantly to graduate education and the mentoring of graduate students is highly desirable. The successful candidate must be able to work with students, faculty, and staff from a wide range of social and cultural backgrounds. We are especially interested in candidates who can contribute to the diversity and excellence of the academic community through their teaching, professional activity, and/or service.

The Computer Science Department has nationally and internationally known research groups in many areas, including databases systems, machine learning, natural language processing, and storage systems. Our beautiful campus has a long history of embracing groundbreaking interdisciplinary work, and our proximity to Silicon Valley and San Francisco affords extensive consulting opportunities and avenues for collaborative research.

RANK: Lecturer with Potential for Security of Employment (LPSOE)

The Teaching Professor in Computer Science is a full-time position with the rights and responsibilities of membership in the Academic Senate and has the official title of “Lecturer with Potential for Security of Employment” (LPSOE) and is analogous to tenure-track. An LPSOE is appointed for two year terms and is eligible for promotion to “Security of Employment,” which is analogous to tenure. Appointees must be granted “Security of Employment” by the end of the eighth year of service for continued employment. Teaching, professional achievement and activity, and university and public service constitute the criteria for advancement. Appointees to this title must also demonstrate intellectual leadership, as documented by materials demonstrating that the candidate has made outstanding and recognized contributions to the development of his or her special field and/or of pedagogy, through publication (either in traditional forms or in electronic format), creative accomplishments, or other professional activity.
